

- Subscription curation vs. hand-selection — A significant number of picture books in the collection were acquired through automated subscription services such as Junior Library Guild. While these services provide convenience, the librarian prefers to hand-select titles to ensure each book is the right fit for Pipestone Area Schools students, curriculum, and community. Moving away from automatic curation toward intentional, librarian-led selection results in a stronger, more purposeful collection.

3. Proposed Disposal Methods

Removed materials will be handled in responsible, professionally appropriate ways. The proposed options are:

1. Sale to an online bookseller — Weeded books in sellable condition may be sold to an online bookseller (such as a used book reseller) in exchange for credit that can be applied toward new library purchases. This approach allows the library to reinvest in updated materials at little or no additional cost.
2. Student giveaway — Books suitable for home use may be offered to students free of charge. Putting books directly into students' hands supports a love of reading and ensures materials find a useful second life in the community.
3. Donation — Books may also be donated to local organizations, community centers, or charitable groups as appropriate.
4. Recycling — Books that are too worn or damaged for any of the above uses will be recycled responsibly.

Note: Items that have been officially deselected from the collection are typically stamped or marked "Withdrawn" before any disposal method is used, in keeping with standard library practice.

4. Closing

Weeding is not a loss—it is an investment in the collection's quality. A curated, current, well-maintained collection better serves students, supports teachers and instruction, and reflects the library's role as a dynamic, living resource at the heart of the school. Thank you for your continued support of the library program at Pipestone Area Schools.
