Mentoring Model

Grade Level Addressed

District-wide

Purpose or Goal

Using the Mentoring Model, the TPSD will employ a Dropout Counselor/Graduation Coach and a Dropout Attendance Officer to serve as monitors for grades 9-12. Additionally, the twenty-three counselors in grades K-12 and four family school coordinators will serve as mentors. Mentors must be:

- Persistent
- Believe that all children have abilities
- Be willing to work closely with families using a "non-blaming approach"
- Advocate for the student
- Committed to documenting the intervention
- Able to work well in different settings

Each mentor must establish trust with the students and their families, sometimes becoming their lifeline and navigator through the school system. The mentor regularly checks on student attendance and academic performance, talks to the families and listens to students, checking and connecting throughout the year. The mentor checks student engagement periodically using several indicators that include attendance, social/behavior performance, and academic performance. Using these indicators, the monitor can then "connect" using either basic or intensive interventions. All students receive basic interventions, which are primarily comprised of purposeful conversations with the monitors once a month for secondary students and once a week for elementary students. The monitor talks to the student about their progress in school and its connection to graduation, possible conflicts or concerns and their resolution, and strengthens student coping skills.

An intensive intervention is triggered by a student exhibiting early warning signs of dropping out of school (e.g., attendance, academic performance, behavior). The monitor taps existing support services when needed and appropriate and increases the degree of interaction with the student, including calling the student and parent in the morning to make sure the student gets out of bed and gets to school.
