What data did we examine?

Last year's academic performance assessment data, summative assessment data, course taking patterns, course credits, grades, absences, enrollment, CTE course data, parent /community meetings, staff and student surveys.

How did we examine the needs of students?

Teachers gathered information from students while in classes, Title I gathered data about students, counselors provided information, parents volunteered information, programs outside of the school that serve students in school provided information.

What needs did our data review elevate?

Students asked for additional time to celebrate culturally important days, students asked for more project based learning and field trips, students asked for less "everyone do the same class same assignment" and more independent work, and more mental health support.

Parents asked for more mental health support for students, and more contact throughout the year from families, more opportunities to work with students in the school, more evening activities where adults and students could learn together. And improving anti-vaping/drugs messaging and helping students who are using cell phones to bully.

Staff asked for more training on culturally responsive practices and how to use SB 13 materials in an effective manner, how to help students with self regulation, and how to help them learn how to have better relationships.
